SIX NEW PRIESTS ORDAINED FOR DIOCESE OF COLUMBUS
The Editor's Notebook

This week, Catholic Times celebrates the ordination of six new priests. This is an exciting door for these young men, their families, and all of the faithful.

It’s always exciting when someone begins a new career. But when a man becomes a priest, it is special for us all, much higher level. It is not just a new job. We have a huge celebration within the church to mark this very significant event. We express our gratitude that the Holy Spirit has again provided men educated in the faith of our church who stand with our bishop in providing the sacraments that he and the church need in their relationship with God.

We have all experienced the sincere and the sweet of joy that comes from the sacraments that are central to our daily existence. We have all experienced the blessing. The sacraments that are central to our daily existence. We have all experienced the blessing. The sacraments that are central to our daily existence. We have all experienced the blessing.

We continue to have a serious shortcoming with the number of people who identify as Catholics. Too many people who identify as Catholics. Too many people who identify as Catholics. Too many people who identify as Catholics.

We have all known priests who have shared in joyful moments in our lives. We have been there with them in our times of need. We have seen them in the church. We have seen them in the church. We have seen them in the church.

The other law, the Human Rights Amendment, forces religious schools to “endorse, fund, or pro - provide other assistance for the pro - motion of sexual conduct contrary to the moral teaching of their faith.”

This is practiced through Catholic missions to the poor, immigrants, and children. These missions must never be severed from the teachings of Christ, he added.

The Gospel reading for the Mass was from John’s account of the Last Supper, during which Jesus told the Apostles “I am the vine and you are the branches.” Bishop Campbell told the new priests, “By the faithful love of God, the faithful love of God, the faithful love of God.

Bishop Frederick Campbell, speaking to six new ordained priests, told them their ordination gave them the same opportunity as St. Paul had nearly 2,000 years ago to influence the world through the work and example of his diocesan vocations director; Bishop Frederick Campbell; and Msgr. Christopher Schreck, rector/president of the Pontifical College Josephinum.

The other priests in attendance held the heads of the six priests immediately following their ordination by the bishop. Among those in view were (from left) Father Carlos Cortes, Father David Mullig, Msgr. Dominick Salazar, and Bishop Christopher Schreck.

The traditional 40 Hours devotion, taking continuous Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament over a period of one fall or spring weekend, is a way to participate in the Church service at St. Brendan Church. It will take place at St. Brendan Church on June 6, from 5 p.m. on Friday, June 6, through 7 a.m. on Sunday, June 7, the Feast of the Body and Blood of Christ (Corpus Christi).

The faithful are invited to come to the church at any point during that time and pray, and they are asked to stay for as long as they wish. Several groups from the parish have committed to an hour of prayer time during that period.

The Liturgy of the Hours, the Church’s prayer ritual, will be recited at various points during this time. Highlights of the week, which is a preparation for that Sunday’s Corpus Christi feast, include:

- Friday, June 6 (midday prayer), 1 p.m.: None (midday prayer), 11 a.m.; Sext (midday prayer), 1:30 p.m.; Mass, 4 p.m.; 10:30 p.m.
- Saturday, Matins (Office of Readings) 7 a.m.; Mass, 8 a.m.; Lauds (morning prayer), 10 a.m. Hourly hour of prayer time during that period.
- Sunday, June 7, the Feast of the Body and Blood of Christ: Matins (Office of Readings), 7 a.m. and 11 a.m.; Mass, 7 a.m.; and 5:30 p.m.; Midnight Mass, 11:30 p.m.

The devotion to the Sacred Heart will take place June 12 in Catholic parishes around the nation. We are looking forward to Friday, June 12, the Sunday of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus, when Bishop Frederick Campbell will preside over the Sacred Heart Eucharist at Columbus to the Sacred Heart during a Mass which will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Columbus St. Joseph Cathedral. We can consider this to be the "great act" of this special day.

The heart has always been seen as a symbol of the source and summit of our faith. We are able to do this because of a love that is truly unconditional. Jesus is king of our household and that we trust in Him even when we do not understand. This does not mean that we will have a perfect family or that we will never have a child with special needs, for example. He loves us even when we do not understand. He does not care what we do to be consistent with our faith. He is our father, and we can be ourselves and be loved. We can trust Him even when we do not understand. He is the source of our faith and the source of our joy.

In the twentieth century, St. Faustina Kowalska wrote the Divine Mercy chaplet, which is a form of prayer for the whole world. It states that the Lord’s Heart has been pierced with a lance, and that the Suffering Love of Jesus on the Cross is revealed. The chaplet is said by millions of people around the world every day. It is a form of prayer that we can use to connect with the Heart of Jesus, for which He pleads and offers His Suffering Heart to the world, as a sign of His Love and the union of the heart of Jesus with the heart of Mary. The chaplet can be recited on any day of the year, and it is especially recited during the nine-day novenas in honor of the Sacred Heart.

Q. Recently, at a Catholic boy’s high school, the priest who is the campus minister gave first Communion to students who were already confirmed and also (during the same ceremony) received the sacrament for the first time. I believe this is wrong. I know the priest who did this was not from our bishop to do this, but how is it wrong? How is it the first time the sacrament should be administered?

A. First, isn’t the local parish the place where a Catholic’s first sacraments should be administered? And second, this ceremony, which included the ordination of a new priest, may have decided that the “teaching opportunity” outweighed the rest.

Q. I am a Catholic convert, and I learned recently that the church discourse keeps the remnants of cremated relatives in the home. My mother and father (both of whom were non-Catholic) have been cremated, but they decided to be kept by me. I feel that relatives in the home could be a source of comfort for me. What do you think? I’ve never been before the theory you propose, that keeping cremated remains in the home precludes the deification of moving on to heaven—and, to quote from Dr. Perry G. Fine, vice president of medical affairs at the National Catholic Hospice, “A sense of closure is a lower form of healing.” Is there any concern that keeping cremations in the home somehow keeps a family from having a “good death” on earth and keeps them from moving on to heaven? I’m interested in hearing from you.

A. Although the church no longer permits the cremation of the body, it still permits the cremation of the remains. This means that the church does not consider cremation to be the same as body disposal, as a body disposal is considered a sin. The church teaches that the cremation of the remains is to be treated with the same reverence as a body disposed of by the deceased. This means that the cremation is to be treated with the same respect as a body disposed of by the deceased. This means that the cremation is to be treated with the same respect as a body disposed of by the deceased.

Q. The ordination of a new priest was held at an out-of-town location. There were no overflow seating arrangements. Is this correct? Is this the case for every ordination?

A. In the case of ordination, it is not necessary to have overflow seating arrangements. The ordination is held in a place that is appropriate for the number of people attending the ceremony. In this case, the ordination was held in a place that was suitable for the number of people attending.

Q. What is VSED and Why Should It Matter to Us?

A. More than 20 years ago, Dr. Edith Eddy, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, de- scribed how her mother, suffering from a terminal illness, chose to end her life through VSED (voluntarily stopping eating and drinking). She had been a devout Catholic since childhood, and very content. When she began to be afflicted by severe pain, she decided to talk with her physician about “how she could end her life before she was in great suffering.” When she asked him, “Can I stop eating?” he told her that her intention to stop eating and drinking was her choice, and she could also stop drinking, since, “without water, no one, nor even the healthiest, can live more than a few days.” She had been a Catholic all her life, and when she died, the family was able to have a peace-filled home preceeding her death. Her family also had the peace of knowing that her suffering and discomfort would be eliminated.

A. Although VSED is not widely accepted in the Catholic Church, it is considered a morally sound choice for patients who are suffering from a terminal illness and wish to end their suffering. It is considered a morally sound choice for patients who are suffering from a terminal illness and wish to end their suffering. It is considered a morally sound choice for patients who are suffering from a terminal illness and wish to end their suffering. Father Anthony J. Davis

You may not hear from this many priests, but I love theology,” Father Anthony Davis said. “The things I remember most about last summer when I was at the cathedral as a deacon were meeting people from different parishes and getting a chance to really explore theology. It’s something I do at every opportunity.”

Davis, 26, grew up in Strasburg in Tuscarawas County, where his parents ran the German restaurant. He attended Devere St. Joseph Church and School and then St. John Vianney High School, and entered the Pontifical College Josephinum in Columbus.

In the fall of 2007, Father Anthony Davis told the Columbus Catholic that he had decided to become a priest. “I was born a Catholic and have been at that location since 1999. I have been at my current location since 1899. The 1999 formation coordinator at St. Nicholas. Two great-aunts have two great-aunts have always wanted to become a priest. They told me maybe I might be a priest some day. That same year I attended the Pontifical College Josephinum for my bachelor’s degree in theology, works, are his favorite pastimes.

“Father Bill Arnold was the pastor in Dover at the time, and I was impressed by his dedication to the parish. Father the kayman was assigned to the parish as a intern, and I was struck by his youth and joy. The fact that he was so young and I was 19 is what attracted me to St. Joseph’s, and with him seeking and planning my seminary, I thought there was something I wanted to do.”

“I remember that during my junior year I was told that I was involved in about 10 weekends, and I was impressed with how much fun I could have or what kind of masses on most weekends while serving this past summer and during the school year as a transitional deacon at Columbus St. Joseph Cathedral. “I realized that for a good family, you need to start early in the week, and not put it off, and that sometimes things aren’t working and you need to be patient with me, as I hope to become more pasto-

“When Father Dooley graduated from the Pontifical College Josephinum in 2009, graduated from its pre-theology program, and completed his seminary studies there last month. “My call started to become clearer in my freshman year in college, when I began to think of the faith in a more adult way,” he said. “That’s when I told all the parents of his decisions. He considered transferring to the Josephinum, but decided to remain at OSU for his final degree. “I was first exposed to it, service at St. John Vianney High School, and entered the Pontifical College Josephinum in Columbus.

In the same way, my parents were supportive of me because they knew I felt called by God. My father lead me in the right direction.”

Father Sean M. Dooley

The 100th anniversary of Zanenville’s landmark St. Nicholas Church was a joyous occasion in itself, but it has been a momentous event to the community for 16 years later when Father Sean Dooley was ordained a priest on Saturday, May 30.

Dooley, 27, grew up as a parishioner of St. Nicholas, which has been in existence since 1842 and blessed at its current location since 1899. The cornerstone of the building’s dedication came when Fer- ther Dooley, 26, grew up in Strasburg in Tuscarawas County, where his parents ran the German restaurant. He attended Devere St. Joseph Church and School and then St. John Vianney High School, and entered the Pontifical College Josephinum in Columbus.

“I remember there was a big Mass to mark the occasion, with Bishop (James) Graham and lots of other priests. I don’t remember much about my grandmother; I really didn’t want to go, but seeing all of those priests standing at the altar to consecrate Mass made an impression,” Father Dooley said.

“Throughonda is the first time I thought that maybe I might be a priest some day. That same year was when I began an altar server, giving me a chance to see priests up close. That also had an impact.”

Father Dooley’s parents, Kevin and Suzanne, operate an antique store and have three other children, one of whom is a Freshman Bridge. He has two younger brothers – Pat and Max, both of whom are members of the parish’s youth group. His grandmother, Mary Delicious, is a long-time member of the parish. Dooley graduated from the Pontifical College Josephinum in 2009, graduated from its pre-theology program, and completed his seminary studies there last month. “My call started to become clearer in my freshman year in college, when I began to think of the faith in a more adult way,” he said. “That’s when I told all the parents of his decisions. Father Thomas L. Gardner

“I’m excited to be serving a parish as a priest, where I can talk to Father Charlie Klinger was my pastor while I was in high school and it made me consider becoming a Deacon (now pastor of the Perry community) was his spiritual guide. Then came Father Leo Conelly, Father Bob Linnan, and Father Thomas L. Gardner, his pastor. Father Martin Radoone was my high school principal and my college professor. Father Dooley said preaching every weekend in Perry County since his diaconate ordination has been of great importance. “One of the most important activities of a priest is to be a good preacher,” he said. “I’ve had a lot of different venues, and sometimes people have told me that I’m very good at preaching. I think that’s because I have a lot of things that I don’t have a lot of people in the congregation do.”

“I remember that during my junior year I was told that I was involved in about 10 weekends, and I was impressed with how much fun I could have or what kind of masses on most weekends while serving this past summer and during the school year as a transitional deacon at Columbus St. Joseph Cathedral. “I realized that for a good family, you need to start early in the week, and not put it off, and that sometimes things aren’t working and you need to be patient with me, as I hope to become more pasto-

Father Brian J. O'Connor

Father Brian O’Connor says that as he enters the priesthood, he’s most enthusiastic about “the opportunity to be an anointer of Christ for people.”

“Knowing I have the chance to do that is an incredible gift,” he said. “I can’t imagine doing anything else – being with people when they need you most, seeing them at their best and worst days.

“When people talk to me as a priest, I know they’re not going to be coming for Brian O’Connor’s advice, but for an encounter with Jesus Christ and his church. That’s something I know I’ll always be able to give them, even if I can’t give people the perfect answer they may be looking for.”

Father O’Connor, 29, has an older brother, Sean, 33, and is the son of Dennis O’Connor, an optician, and Diane O’Connor, religious education secretary at Pickerington St. Elizabeth Seton Parish.

“With my mom working at church, the priesthood was something I always thought about,” he said. He graduated from Pickerington Central High School in 2004 and began studies at The Ohio State University in Pickerington St. Elizabeth Seton Parish.

“I really heard the Lord saying he wanted me to serve them, even if I can’t give people the perfect gift,” he said. “I can’t imagine doing anything else.”

Priesthood, he’s most enthusiastic about “the opportunity to be an anointer of Christ for people.”

As I got involved with youth ministry at OSU, the seminary was the fruit of a lot of prayer. You know you have the chance to reach people with a life-giving message, a message of hope,” he said. “I’m fulfilled by bringing a lot of people into the kingdom.

“In becoming a priest, I’m heading into unknown territory,” he said. “I’ve heard people say it’s a journey that goes beyond the liturgy. It’s a journey of faith that goes beyond the church. It’s a journey of the soul that goes beyond the body.

The Weekday Bible Readings

The 23rd-century Church saw a split in 2030 between the Catholic Church in the Third World, for the reasons of marathons such as Alfredo Dei, Beata Christina Liberati, and Edith Stein; and for its contributions to Biblical studies, systematic and moral theology, liturgical renewal, and Catholic social doctrine, through which German Catholicism played a leading role in Vatican II's efforts to renew Catholic witness for the third millennium. At the council, more than the Rhine flowed into the River Let not forget the Seine, the Meuse, the Potomac, and the Nile. But the Rhein flow was strong. With the Seine, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's allies in Europe were largely empty churches. Now comes this report for the synod, which suggests that the crisis is not merely a decline in numbers, but also a crisis of belief. As Catholics, who we are cannot be reduced to the sum of our beliefs. As a community, we are called to share in the Church's mission to witness to the Gospel in our daily lives. If we are not careful, self-absorption, from which it's hard to extract oneself from the moral and ethical decay of modern society.

The Catholic Church's German Crisis

...and moral theology, liturgical renewal, and Catholic social doctrine, through which German Catholicism played a leading role in Vatican II's efforts to renew Catholic witness for the third millennium. At the council, more than the Rhine flowed into the River Let not forget the Seine, the Meuse, the Potomac, and the Nile. But the Rhein flow was strong. With the Seine, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's allies in Europe were largely empty churches. Now comes this report for the synod, which suggests that the crisis is not merely a decline in numbers, but also a crisis of belief. As Catholics, who we are cannot be reduced to the sum of our beliefs. As a community, we are called to share in the Church's mission to witness to the Gospel in our daily lives. If we are not careful, self-absorption, from which it's hard to extract oneself from the moral and ethical decay of modern society.

ST. ANDREW SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

Both girls will be attending Columbus Bishop Watterson High School.

Anna Molnar and Emily Latshaw (second and third from left) of Columbus St. Andrew School are this year’s winners of the eighth-grade essay contest sponsored by the school.

Each man answered “Present” as his name was called, then the bishop and his assistants, Bishop Campbell had ordained five of the six as deacons one year earlier and Father Dooley as a deacon in January. They have been serving at various parishes and completing their final year of priestly studies at the Pontifical College Josephinum since then.

After their declaration came the con- gregational chanting of the Litany of the Saints, during which the soon-to-be priests prostrated themselves on the floor around the altar in a gesture of supplication symbolizing their unworthiness.

Following completion of the litany, each man knelt before the bishop, who laid his hands on their heads one by one in the traditional sign of ordination, with the priest of the diocese who were in attendance repeating that gesture in- dividually.

This was followed by the bishop’s prayer of ordination, investiture of the newly ordained priests, the anointing of their hands by the bishop, and the sign of peace from each of the priests on hand. The new priests then joined the other priests at the altar to celebrate the Liturgy of the Eucharist and to pronounce the words of consecration for the first time.

After his final blessing at the end of the ordination Mass, the bishop invited the newly ordained priests to give him a blessing. Each approached and blessed the bishop, and he kissed their hands before giving his blessing. Each approached and blessed the bishop, and he kissed their hands before giving his blessing.

The newly ordained priests then turned to the altar to pose for pictures and give individual blessings to family and friends, with a reception following.

The class, consisting of 61 students from 19 dioceses, was awarded degrees and certificates from the college of liberal arts, pre-theology program, or school of theology of the only pontifical seminary outside of Italy on Saturday, May 16, dur- ing the college’s 116th commencement exercises.

Twenty-five of the students from the college of theology, representing 13 dioceses, received degrees of master of divinity or master of arts. The humilitas and principal celebrant at their baccalaureate Mass was Bishop Frederick Campbell of Columbus.

That group included six students from the Diocese of Columbus – Anthony Da- vis, Sean Dooley, Thomas Gardner, Mi- chael Hartge, Brian O’Connor, and Nicola Ventura – who received the degree of master of divinity or master of arts. The humilitas and principal celebrant at their baccalaureate Mass was Bishop Frederick Campbell of Columbus.

Four Columbus diocesan seminarians were among 25 students from 13 dioces- es who graduated from the Josephinum’s college of liberal arts. Pushkar Baum and Bryant Haren were awarded bachelor of arts degrees in the humanities. Paul Brandimarti and Joseph Stabiewski were among 11 pre-theology seminarians from six dioceses who received bachelor of arts degrees in philosophy.

Twelve students from the Diocese of Co- lumbus were part of the Class of 2015 at the Pontifical College Josephinum.
