Non-discrimination order attacks religious freedom

By Mark Patterson

President Barack Obama’s executive orderves the involvement of the Catholic Church since it was first introduced in 2005. This program is a key provision in the Employment Non-discrimination Act (ENDA) introduced in Congress in 2005. The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) is working to help protect the Church in this area.

2 answering for basic human rights and to work toward justice, we have a moral obligation to help people in need. The USCCB’s efforts to help those who are struggling to break the cycle of poverty and to make a living for themselves and their families is an important step in the fight against poverty.

The Church has to begin by providing people with the tools that allow them to take those first steps up the ladder of success.

In an earlier posting July 21 on the USCC blog, Archbishop Lori, Bishop Malone, and Archbishop Wenski of Miami addressed their opposition to the non-discrimination order. They said: “We are considered to be the faithful and Catholic, that the Church has to begin by providing people with the tools that allow them to take those first steps up the ladder of success. We do this through our own efforts, through our faith communities, through our parishes, and through our diocese.

Did you ponder and meditate upon the things that are most important to you during the past two weeks? We consider this question of significant importance and ask it of our readers because we want to know how we can help you to get to the same level of holiness. To help us get there, we need the example of saints such as Kazimierz Tekacki, who was a great confessor of our faith. Many of our sports heroes. Some, it seems, are more deserving than others. Let us be sure to grow in Christ and give our children the same opportunity to look up and idolize our saints. Maybe our more contemporary saints, some older and more “traditional” saints are better received. Like us, each of our children is different. We do them a disservice if we fail to keep our saints at the forefront of their teaching and example, telling their stories with pride and sincerity.

St. Brigid Forms Middle School Group

Dublin St. Brigid of Kildare Church is forming a middle school youth group for seventh- and eighth-grade students in the parish and school. The group will be led by Kim VanHullf and will meet once a month on Sundays, beginning in the fall, for faith, fellowship, community building, and service. Members will meet the 12th of each month. Mass as a group with their families, then meet in Hendricks Hall for prayer and pizza, followed by icebreaker activities and “one cool location” for socializing. They will end the day by working on a different service project at each meeting, either in Hendricks Hall or at another location in the community.

“One goal of the program is to meet many families where they are,” VanHullf said. “We understand it sometimes difficult for parents to find meaningful service opportunities. Confirmation when parents and students are already interested in volunteering in today’s world. We hope to make this easier for families and to give children a positive experience of service by offering a variety of opportunities they can do with their families, while also providing positive direction for the students during small- and large-group discussions about issues that challenge them today.”

Before the program was launched, a committee was formed to study the interest in and need for it. The committee conducted online surveys and focus groups and met with individuals in the parish and school to determine the interest level and what parishioners would want this type of program.

VanHullf was a part of the committee. She has been a catechist at the parish for six years and six-grade religious education this past year. She also has served on the VanHullf team’s education committee at St. Brigid and has been a board member for Family Life. She also works in the religious education department of a parish in Indianapolis.

She holds a master’s degree in theology and a bachelor’s degree in journalism.

A Holy Father as a Jesuit? That’s what it was like to be from two places and at home in the world,” she said. “I explore what it feels like to be from two places and belonging to both in my work.”

Apostle Francis still bound by his Jesuit vows, but with an asterisk. The question you raise—whether Pope Francis is still a Jesuit—is an interesting one.

But one need only read a bit further in Exodus 20:4 to hear the Lord’s command that statues not bow down before them or serve them.”

Why, then, do Catholics worship statues? Aren’t they idolatry? (St. James, Missouri)

Our Holy Father Francis is still a Jesuit—"is an interesting one," as Pope. The question you raise—whether Pope Francis is still a Jesuit—is an interesting one. He was dispensed from poverty because, canonically, a bishop owes a canonical property, and from obedience because of papal indult.

The Church itself, when it makes a judgment on this, the Church is itself subject to the order. A Jesuit must hold the whole order to be still a Jesuit, and I think that he does, too. Just a few days after his election to the papacy, Francis wrote a letter to the Jesuit general superior in which he referred to the Jesuits as “our family,” and his papal rule of arms contains the official seal of the Jesuit order.

I will hold that Francis remains a Jesuit is valid and is in line with Jesuit vows, but it is also possible that the whole papal rule of arms contains the official seal of the Jesuit order.

I realize that some will say that the Church is one body, and that Francis remains a Jesuit is valid and is in line with Jesuit vows, but it is also possible that the whole papal rule of arms contains the official seal of the Jesuit order.

Francis wrote a letter to the Jesuit superior general in which he defended the rights of the Jesuits to have a faculty of theology and a faculty of philosophy.

This past March, I attended the 155th men’s Mass at the Shrine of Our Lady of Consolation in Carey. The homily was delivered by the Rev. Msgr. John Brown, the president & CEO of The Catholic University of America. As a native of Ohio, I felt a certain kinship with his words, and I was struck by his call to action.

An American in a strange land

I am a Christian, slave not free, and proud and together as a nation.

It is with a particular sense of both separation and appropriation that I find myself so melancholy while living in this land—and so relieved with the history and the everyday prosperity that makes being here so wonderful. I am an American in a strange land, but, by God’s grace and mercy, I am also proud, so very proud to be a part of something so perfect and so beautiful and to be my father’s and, most certainly, my nation’s son.

I am proud to be an American, where at least I know I’m free.

And I gladly stand, next to you and defend her still today.

There isn’t no doubt I love this land, God bless the USA.

DOMINICAN LEARNING CENTER HELPING ADULTS LEARN FOR 20 YEARS

Twenty years ago this November, the Dominican Sisters of St. Mary of the Springs opened a center for adult education on the southeast campus of Columbus City School District to help adults pursue their GED and ABE certificates. Today, the center serves about 300 students and has about 190 tutors at the center on Saturday mornings and 100 tutors at the center on Wednesday, Sept. 3, the center’s 20th anniversary. The center is closed for the summer months.

The center has undergone a number of changes over the years, including the name change to its current name. Sister Shawn Babin, OP, who is executive director of the center, said that the center has had to make changes in order to keep up with the needs of its students. The center has had to adapt to changes in the job market, and it has had to change its programs to meet the needs of its students.

The center is working toward a multimodal approach to education, with the goal of helping students become self-sufficient and independent. The center offers a variety of programs, including classes in reading, writing, and mathematics, as well as classes in technology, and has a variety of tutors available for students to choose from.

The center is looking for new students on Tuesdays from 5 to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tutoring can be one-on-one or in small groups, depending on individual needs, and tutors will be assigned based on the student’s individual project. The center is also looking for an advisory council to help with its fundraising efforts.

Patrick Sprigler of Columbus and St. Rose Church has earned the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest rank available in Boy Scouting. He is a member of Scout Troop 295, led by Scoutmaster Doug Byrnes, who has been active in the community since the church was built more than 30 years ago. But the structure at the church is better to act now than wait until the related ‘greenhouse effect’ has reached crisis proportions” and called the faithfield to change their life styles and find ways to limit the factors that damage the environment.

During the inaugural homily of his pontificate, Pope Francis made a challenge: “Let us protect Christ in our lives, so that we can protect others, so that we can protect creation!”. He challenged us to be protectors of the poor and the environment – a challenge to all people of good will, to individuals as well as leaders of nations. A year later, Pope Francis’ challenge continues. His general papal audience for April 4th was attended by 100,000 people.

I know there is more I can do personally to be a better steward of God’s creation and I’m learning along the way. There are things all of us can do individually, as families, as private communities, and as a nation to be good stewards of that which we have been given. If you would like to learn more, visit the websites of the U.S. Catholic bishops’ environmental justice program, the Catholic Conference for World Peace, and the Catholic Climate Covenant.

In 2001, the U.S. Catholic bishops issued a statement on climate change and issued a plea for dialogue, prudence, and the common good. Although the Church has consulted with many scientists and experts in the field of the environment, it also acknowledges that it does not have all the answers to this complex issue. However, it also acknowledges that changes in the climate are taking place, that there are actions we can take that will have a positive effect on climate change, and that, on the other side of prudent and concern for the poor and the common good, it is better to act now than wait until the related problem gets worse and the remedies are more costly.

The teachers teach that, at its core, global climate change is ‘about the future of God’s creation and the one human family and about protecting both the environment and the natural environment. It is about our human stewardship of God’s creation and our responsibility to be the people who come after us.’

The Office of Readings for the Solemnity of the Ascension offers a lovely excerpt from one of St. Augustine’s letters. The Bishop of Hippo takes his text Colossians 3:1-2: “If then you have been raised with Christ, seek the things above, for that is what is above, for that is where Christ is seated, at the right hand of God. Set your minds on things that are above, not on things that are on earth.” A familiar script, right? Right, but as Augustine, so we, too, are already there...or should be...the problem is we are not yet fulfilled in our bodies...While in heaven we are there by the Holy Spirit, here with us by his divinity, his power and his love. We are there, but we know that we cannot be there by love alone...The Lord’s旨 is to order us in the order of 70 million Catholics in the United States. How many of us think of our supernatural life? As the Divine Master put it, if we really believed that “the most important part of our being wants Christ and that we should live the Holy Trinity” how would we comport ourselves here on earth? We are here now to answer that question.

There are many reasons to explore the change in liturgy. The Ascension of our Lord is the central point of Good Friday’s drama. It’s a tasty way to peek at a whole season of Ascension. From Sundays “after Pentecost” to “Sunday in Ordinary Time.”

Ordinary Time. As has been noted previously in this space (or perhaps to the point of reader tedium), there is nothing more “ordinary” in the world than the Real Presence and the Ascension. For us that Colossians text suggests that Augustine makes explicit, human “time” has been drawn into the divine life through the mystery of Christ’s return to the Father and his being seated “at the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Hebrews 1:3) as Lord of history, in that sense, is “inside” the Godhead. And there is nothing ordinary about that.

The Ascension Sunday “after Pentecost” is common to the Church that the first outrighting of the Holy Spirit, celebrating the Danish National Day, 500 years after the church throughout history, so that the Church can come to the Lord’s promise to “be there by love”...”He who has seen me has seen the Father, and that by the Holy Spirit” how would we comport ourselves here on earth? We are here now to answer that question.

JESUS: A PILGRIMAGE

BOOK REVIEW

JAMES MARTIN SJ

James Martin was one of the first to take Jesus seriously as a pilgrim in the modern sense.

In his latest book, "Jesus: A Pilgrimage," Father Martin connects the dots between the physical and spiritual journeys of Jesus and the pilgrims who follow in his footsteps.

Martin's pilgrimage was a journey to the places where Jesus walked and taught, a journey that took him to the Holy Land, the Gospels, and the people of the Bible.

Martin's writing is accessible and engaging, his insights are profound and thought-provoking.

He writes about the places where Jesus walked and taught, the people he met, and the events that took place.

Martin's pilgrimage was a journey to the places where Jesus walked and taught, a journey that took him to the Holy Land, the Gospels, and the people of the Bible.

Martin's writing is accessible and engaging, his insights are profound and thought-provoking.

He writes about the places where Jesus walked and taught, the people he met, and the events that took place.
FRANCISCAN SISTERS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARIES

Three Columbus Sisters of St. Francis of Penance and Christian Charity are celebrating significant anniversaries of their profession of vows. This year is the 50th anniversary as professed members of the order for Sisters Joanne Fogarty, OSF, and Regina Snyder, OSF, and the 70th anniversary for Sister Carmen Paris, OSF.

The three joined nine other Franciscans who formerly worked in the Diocese of Columbus for a jubilee Mass and dinner at the order’s Stella Niagara, N.Y., provincial house.

Sister Joanne has led Hilliard St. Brendan Church’s ministry of faith formation for the past 14 years. She now directs the parish’s new ministry of welcome and hospitality. She is a Perry County native and a former principal of New Lexington St. Rose School.

Sister Regina, originally from Columbus St. Catharine Church, does development work and grant writing for Columbus Holy Spirit School. She has been principal of St. Mary, St. Agnes/St. Stephen, St. Cecilia, and St. Leo schools, all in Columbus.

Sister Carmen, retired at the Columbus St. Leo convent, ministers to the elderly and families. She was a housemother at the former Columbus St. Vincent Orphanage and also served in Columbus at St. Ann’s Hospital and in nursing homes.

Other jubilarians with local ties are:
- 50 years: Sister Donna Marie Anthony, OSF, a volunteer at the St. Francis Center in Niagara Falls, N.Y., taught at the former Pope Columbus John XXIII School and New Lexington St. Aloysius Academy. Sister Maureen Harris, OSF, spiritual care and outreach coordinator for five Buffalo, N.Y., parishes, was a chaplain at St. Ann’s Hospital.

Augustine & Gabriel and Holy Rosary-St. John churches and for Central College Presbyterian Church in Westerville.
- 65 years: Sister Maureen Dorsey, OSF, a volunteer at the St. Francis Center in Niagara Falls, served at St. Vincent Orphanage, taught at New Lexington St. Aloysius Academy, as well as Columbus St. Anthony and Worthington St. Michael schools. She was principal of the former Columbus Holy Rosary School.
- 70 years: Sister Mary Lacaria, OSF, retired at Stella Niagara, was principal at Columbus St. Anthony School. She taught at Columbus Holy Rosary, St. Leo, and St. John the Evangelist schools and St. Aloysius Academy.
